

When I imagine Lalla's Romana getting spanked, I always seem instinctively to go for snug-fitting cream-colored panties. I've no idea why (and it isn't because of a potential pun on 'cream').

The obvious moment is in the last episode when the Doctor returns to the cellar to find her working for Scaroth, and he says he'll be very angry with her if she has been building a time machine (which of course she has). So when they are locked up again with Duggan, the Doctor's first action, after admonishing Romana and telling her (to her horror) that she has been working for the Jagaroth, is to put her across his knee and pull up her skirt to reveal those tight, cream panties I mentioned. Duggan at once intervenes with his characteristic 'We don't have time for this' routine. (I guess he takes the fact of the spanking for granted: Romana's outfit establishes her as obviously the Doctor's pupil and subject to his discipline. But he just wants to get out, and the Doctor can deal with her later; but this would not be much good for us, because that would have to be after the end of the story!) Anyways, from her undignified position Romana fixes him with a look and says 'You keep out of this', then grits her teeth as the Doctor's palm starts to crack down hard across her under-protected bottom.

Another correspondent of mine (not on the mailing list, sadly) once suggested that Romana could get caught up in a school trip to the Louvre and punished by the schoolmistress. I'll have to look out that message.

For good measure, let's also have the Doctor giving the Countess a spanking: she's such a naughty girl! (Somehow the business of stealing the Mona Lisa for fun and kudos is on that level, unlike the considered evil of Scaroth.) The best opportunity is when he confronts her, again in the last episode: maybe a good spanking will cure her of her willful blindness. Of course, the Countess would call for her servants to come and intervene, but maybe they would be just a little slow once they arrived - enjoying the spectacle too much!